Contributing to resilience through the integration of gender perspective in the defence sector reform in four countries of the Western Balkans

by Vesna Cipraš, Danijela Đurović, Ilica Ivanović and Tatjana Višacki

Women in the Western Balkans (WB) region face challenges related to equal access and advancement opportunities in the military. The imbalance can be in part attributed to the male-dominated defence sector and persisting gender stereotypes. Women bring skills and perspectives, which the armed forces (AFs) require to address increasingly complex security risks in the WB region. How can gender equality in the AFs increase as part of a defence sector reform agenda? This policy brief attempts to offer possible responses. The emphasis is twofold: Regular gender-disaggregated data gathering is sine qua non for gender-responsive policymaking. Regional thematic cooperation can work as an accelerator of gender equality processes while also contributing to the resilience of the region.

What is Cookie?

A cookie is a small piece of data sent from a website and stored in a user's web browser while a user is browsing a website. When the user browses the same website in the future, the data stored in the cookie can be retrieved by the website to notify the website of the user's previous activity.

How do we use cookies?

A visit to this page could generate the following types of cookie.

Strictly necessary cookies

These cookies are essential in order to enable you to move around the website and use its features, such as accessing secure areas of the website. Without these cookies services you have asked for, like shopping baskets or e-billing, cannot be provided.

2. Performance cookies

These cookies collect information about how visitors use a website, for instance which pages visitors go to most often, and if they get error messages from web pages. These cookies don't collect information that identifies a visitor. All information these cookies collect is aggregated and therefore anonymous. It is only used to improve how a website works.

3. Functionality cookies

These cookies allow the website to remember choices you make (such as your user name, language or the region you are in) and provide enhanced, more personal features. For instance, a website may be able to provide you with local weather reports or traffic news by storing in a cookie the region in which you are currently located. These cookies can also be used to remember changes you have made to text size, fonts and other parts of web pages that you can customise. They may also be used to provide services you have asked for such as watching a video or commenting on a blog. The information these cookies collect may be anonymised and they cannot track your browsing activity on other websites.

4. Targeting and advertising cookies

These cookies are used to deliver adverts more relevant to you and your interests. They are also used to limit the number of times you see an advertisement as well as help measure the effectiveness of the advertising campaign. They are usually placed by advertising networks with the website operator's permission. They remember that you have visited a website and this information is shared with other organisations such as advertisers. Quite often targeting or advertising cookies will be linked to site functionality provided by the other organisation.
